

To Whom It May Concern,

Through this letter, I'd like to recommend Vico Lee who has interned at my firm, Coinhako, a cryptocurrency brokerage, and to endorse his contributions to the firm. Under my supervision as the co-founder of Coinhako, Vico thrived and flourished tremendously.

As an intern, he was very creative and insightful. Harnessing his past cryptocurrency trading experiences, he could formulate unique ideas that no usual software engineers had. With his knowledge, he singlehandedly constructed and deployed a telegram bot which scraped crypto news and sends to clients who have indicated interests. This has helped the firm significantly as customers now knew that we were able to provide them with real-time, reliable news about the coins they were interested in – a feature largely lacking yet highly crucial in the crypto world.

Throughout his time at Coinhako, he had exemplified extreme diligence and focus on his work, often producing results quickly. His lack of coding experiences was quickly compensated with his insatiable thirst for more knowledge. He needed little guidance from his colleagues and when faced with various obstacles, he exhibited independence and perseverance well beyond his years.

Vico's warm and welcoming character also enabled him to communicate effectively with his colleagues. He often lightened the mood of the workplace and raised morale by picking on their brains about problems and solutions.

Most importantly, Vico had the foresight like no other interns. He was not just at Coinhako for an internship. Instead, he was there to leave a long-lasting impact. He made sure that his project laid the foundation for further future developments. Using the path he has paved, the company now has numerous doors opened that it can exploit to further its reach via Telegram, building a fully seamless and efficient trading platform for its customers.

Vico was never afraid of the "how to implement" and was always thinking about the "what is needed." His fearlessness in thinking big is a quintessential trait in all developers. Regardless of what he decides to do in future, I strongly believe that he will be a great addition to your team.

Yours Sincerely,
